

MYO Accessories

meet the artisans—

MYO Accessories is well aware of the poverty among indigenous groups in Mexico, where the company is located. The company was started to help these people live better lives by employing them, mostly women, to make their products, such as the candy wrapper purses.

In addition to offering these women employment, they give them the opportunity to take the materials to their homes so they can better care for their families while they work. This helps improve the quality of their lives as well as provide a sustainable income.

Using a similar technique that children use to make paper chains from gum wrappers, the artisans of MYO crafted sturdy bags from crinkly misprinted wrappers. Amidst the bright colored squares, one can detect everything from peanuts, ingredient lists, to bar codes.

Partners in Fair Trade

MYO Accessories

meet the artisans—

MYO Accessories is well aware of the poverty among indigenous groups in Mexico, where the company is located. The company was started to help these people live better lives by employing them, mostly women, to make their products, such as the candy wrapper purses.

In addition to offering these women employment, they give them the opportunity to take the materials to their homes so they can better care for their families while they work. This helps improve the quality of their lives as well as provide a sustainable income.

Using a similar technique that children use to make paper chains from gum wrappers, the artisans of MYO crafted sturdy bags from crinkly misprinted wrappers. Amidst the bright colored squares, one can detect everything from peanuts, ingredient lists, to bar codes.

Partners in Fair Trade